I come now to the active measures which we might take ourselves, of which three different ones occur to me.

(1) Let our Taungli Yamen write to their

Foreign Office, maintaining that the law of all nations prescribes that an international arrangement in the nature of a convention between two of them is not binding until the advisability of making such an arrangement had been properly discussed between them and until it has been signed by the respective sovereigns of the two contracting powers. That the U.S. Government have committed a breach of auternational law in proclaiming to their officials and people that such an arrangement is to be enforced against intending Chinese immigrants, without waiting for the sovereign of China to signify his assent to such an arrangement by signing a fresh convention to that effect. That if America claims complete independence of action and avows the principle of benefiting itself, regardless of the injury caused to other nations, then perhaps we may on our side frame new regulations prejudicial to Americans, and promulgate them as law without troubling ourselves to wait for the consent of America. Then if America should consont to such new regulations made by us injuriously affecting American citizens, we can reciprocate her complaisance by agreeing to the law excluding Chinese from the States.

(2) In the XXX. Article of the American Treaty with China, it is agreed "that should at any time the Ta-Tsing Empire grant to any nation, or the merchants or citizens of any nation with navigation, commerce, political or other intercourse, which is not conferred by this Treaty. such right, privilege, and favour shall at once freely enure to the benefit of the United States, its public officers, merchants, and oitizons." This Anticlo ovinces a desire to show the same favour to America as to the most favoured nation. Let us then, if America proceeds with us on a diametrically opposite principle, inform her that henceforward the XXX. Article must be considered null and void, and hereafter chould we make any concessions to other nations, America will no longer be able to claim similar advantages.

(3) There are a considerable number of Americans employed in China at the present time. in mechanical industry and in manufactories, as interpreture, as professors and teachers, as military or naval instructors, commanders of Chinese blished at Tientsin under the auspices of the war-vessels, as captains and mates, as pilots and railway-men, and although their position is genbusiness of the meeting, which was merely a erally a very different one from that of the Chinese in the employment of Americans in Ameriet, they are equally employés or hired men. Let us then send the word through every Chinese province that all such are to be discharged from their positions, that men of other nationalities are to be engaged in their stead; and that for the future no Americans are to be employed by Chinese. Let it be understood; however, that when the law prohibiting Chinese labour from going to America is Wu Kuang-p'ei, formerly a member of the abrogated, they will be re-engaged. Then they will blame their own Government for the loss of their situations, and all the world-will-say that the reprisal was a just one.

With regard to the bait held out to us that the anti-Chinese law will only hold good for a What is the cause of the opposition to the period of years, the consolation held out by Chinese in the United States? The Tientsin train, however, rushed on at the same pace, and Ah Shang seeing the imminence of the danger, ran to turn off the steam : but the foreigner struck him a violent blow on the back of the hand which prevented him from effecting his purpose. Two weird stories are current with regard to the accident, and superstitionaly believed by quite a number of the people. It is said that hence there must be a delay which will be in after the calamity, in the dead of the night, the T'ang ku people heard the piteous wailing of the spirits of the dead which had been forced from their earthly habitations with such awful suddenness; the cries rose and fell, sounding sometimes near and sometimes far away, as if the manes were hevering through the air looking for a place of refuge. The people lay awake listening to this wailing, sometimes abruptly broken off and sometimes long and piercing, and their hair stood on end with foar. The other story is, that at a station called Ch'ang-kiang a railway watcher named Yang while going his rounds, chanced to look up at the bright moon and stars, and saw a ghostly train, hurrying on at full speed, stop, and then fade from his view. This was far from the scene of the accident, in a remote and lonely spot with no one living near. There were some trucks stand ug in a siding, but he found they had not moved an inch.—Daily

COMMERCIAL TRANSFORMATION OF CANTON.

M. Imbault-Huart, the French Vice-Consul at Canton, has recently addressed to his Government a valuable report on the trade of Canton. After an exhaustive study of the subject he comes to the conclusion that though Canton is the most commercial and flourishing of any port in China, it will ero long be relegated to a third or fourth order as an entrepot. After some historical facts which do not need repetition, he comes to the part that France more distinctly plays. The first company known as the Compagnie de Chine was inaugurated in 1660, and four years later was amalgamuted with the Compagnie des. Indes. From 1719 this company made voyages to China from time to timedown to 1834, when its monopoly of the China. Tradewas discontinued. Then came the Treaty of 842, and the opening of other ports to trade besides Canton. This act was of course the first blow to the supremacy of Canton. It ceased to be as it had been for a century the head distributing depôt for many districts. The establishment of Hongkong was at the same time; a very

French commerce at Canton, the Consul oursues, has no representatives, excepting one house which made extensive purchases of silk for the Lyons market. He would like to see a French silk syndicate established there of which Comptoir d'Escompte. The commercial situation created by the Franco-Chinese Convention of 1886 as to trade with Tonquin-which M. Huart thinks will be very advantageous to France-will also be a blow to Canton, as it will create other centres of distribution. Not only this, but the idea of goods gaining admittance by this route to Kwang si has stimulated the Hong Kong Chamber of Commerce to agitate for the opening of the Si-Kiang as a further route. It is only a question of time, thinks M. Huart, before the Chinese agree to this idea. The first port to be opened would be Nu-chow, and later Nan-ning. The interests of foreigners. Chinese merchants and the Imperial Government are all in favour of it. The day when the Si-Kinng is opened the commerce of Canton will decrease yet more. Steamers would pass by the city and go and come direct from Hongkong to Nu-chow and Nanning, the ports near the consuming and producing areas. There will then only remain to Canton, concludes M. Huart, a small trade to serve the city and the districts immediately
